Cowell Theater, a fully equipped, audience friendly space with 437 seats, acts as a cultural center of San Francisco, as well as boasting world-class bay views.

Fort Mason was a military base established in the 1860s and named a national historic landmark in 1985 for its significant role as the principal West Coast port in World War II. Lower Fort Mason, now Fort Mason Center, administers a unique cultural, educational, and recreational center in partnership with the National Park Service and offers a variety of activities of the highest quality at minimum or no cost suitable for all ages and interests.

San Francisco Lyric Opera is delighted to be performing in this historically- and culturally-rich venue, continuing the company's tradition of presenting classical opera in an intimate and comfortable setting.
